BAUM'S DRY GOODS DEPARTMENT OUR NEW ENTERPRISE AND HOW WE ARE

We must take this means of thanking the public for the encouragment we have received at their hands to run our Dry Goods Department with strictly first class goods. When we reopened it early in the season we announced our intention of selling only first-class goods, and have repeatedly reminded our friends and patrons that when goods were at low figures they were best goods marked at special values. We carry only the best and mark them at figures that sell them.

We shall continue to advertise only special values and assure you that though prices on reading them may not astound you, upon examination our qualities will tell. As a means of distinguishing specials, which cannot be duplicated, we shall mark them with a star—thus:

CITY AND DISTRICT.

THE DISTRICT CHEMIST'S WORK. Operations in His Laboratory During the Past Year.

THE PURITY AND POTABILITY OF THE CITY'S WATER SUPPLY-TESTS APPLIED TO THE WATER-EXAMINATIONS MADE OF PAVE-MENTS AND CEMENTS. The annual report of Prof. E. J. De Smedt, chemist of the District of Columbia, which was submitted to-day to the Engineer Commissioner, gives an interesting account of the operations of his office for the last fiscal year. For the health office of the District there were ARGE NUMBER OF NEW AND SECOND HAND MOQUET AND BRUSSELS, MADE UP MIS-FIT CARPETS, STAIR CARPETS, &c. articles ana yzed and their usefulness and inarticles ana yzed and their usefulness and influence in a sanitary point of view. These analyses comprised 30 of water, 11 of milk, 9 of butter, 2 of me at, 2 of vinegar and 1 of coffee. Four samples of water were found unfit for drinking purposes; 4 of milk were found to be adulterated with water; 2 of butter adulterated with lard; 2 of vinegar lacking required strength, and one of coffee adulterated with roots.

THE CITY'S WATER SUPPLY. "During the months of May and June, 1885," the report says, "considerable excitement was created in regard to the purity of the water supply of this city. Twenty-three analyses were made at the time by several prominent chemists of the different departments of the govern-ment, and some were made by myself. A portion of the samples were taken direct from the Potomac river, some from the different lakes and reservoirs, and others from the water pipes in the city. The conclusion we arrived at was that the water supply of this city, like all river water, is of a variable quality, owing to climatic influences, but that it is, nevertheless, good, potable water, and of a healthy above to This potable water, and of a healthy character. This subject has been treated in my former annual reports. The following statement will show the result of my last analysis of a sample of the water supply: Appearance, turbid. Hardness, 4 degrees, Solid residue 94. milligrammes per liter, parts per million. Organic and volatile, 30. milligrammes. Mineral matter, 64. milligrammes. Free ammonia, 0.06 milligrammes, Albuminoid ammonia, 0.08 milligrammes. Nitrites, slight traces. Nitrates, 0.4 milligrammes. Chlorine, 4. milligrammes. Oxygen required, 0.42 milligrammes. Microscopic examination, good. Opinion, good potable water. In regard to the fish-like odor which has been detected in our water supply, all scientific authorities agree in attributing it to the formation of microscopic algæ, such as conferrasceæ oscillatoriæ, and proto-cocci, but there is no evito warrant a suspicion that this water this summer, been quite general all over the United States. It is also remarked, periodically, more or less, in other parts of the world. I was unable to experiment on the algse found in our reservoirs, owing to the fact that they had all disappeared when I endeavored to pro-MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATIONS.

The methods I have adopted in the examination and analyses of water have been fully described by me in the report of the Health offlcer, D. C., for the year 1880. Still I deem it proper to say a few words in regard to the examination of water by the aid of the microscope, without which the analysis would be incomplete, notwithstanding its use is often neglected by the analyst. Inasmuch as it is the character, rather than the quantity of the organic matter found, by which we judge the quality of water in a sanitary point of view, we are neces-sarily obliged to go into the most minute details connected with the subject matter, and here it is that the microscope becomes indispensable, and very often gives us that precise information which enables us to determine the nature of the organic matter referred to. The corpuscules visible under the microscope are corpuscules visible under the microscope are sand, clay, chalk, &c. The vegetable debris consists of leaves, fibers, etc. Animal debris arises principally from insects. The living organisms found in water consist of vibrians, bacteriæ, algæ, dtatomadeæ, infusoriæ, eggs of taniæ, of ascaridas, and a multitude of microscopic organisms which are generally found in polluted water. The re-agents I generally employ are a solution of iodine, which gives a blue color to the amylaceous cells; second, a solution of carmine in glycerine and alcohol lution of carmine in glycerine and alcohol, which colors red the vegetable cells; third, the violet methylene, which colors the bacteries.

Now, inasmuch as it is sometimes difficult to ascertain the putrescibility of water by the also make use of the method adopted by Dr. August Smith (revue d'hygiene et de police sanitaire tom V, No. 9), which is as follows: Dissolve 5 grammes of pure gelatine with 2 centigrammes of phosphate of soda in 100 grammes of pure distilled water, then add fresh albumen and heat the whole to 100° for the purpose of clarification, then filter the purpose of clarification, then filter. Twenty-five C. C. of this solution is mixed with 25 C. C. of the water to be examined; the tubes, when filled, are kept for a few minutes in a water bath at plus 25° centigrade, in order that assimilation may be periected; the tube is then closed with clean cotton and kept for several days in a warm place heated to about plus 30° to 35° centigrade. When the water which is added to the gelatine solution is per-fectly pure (boiled distilled water) the liquid under examination remains almost intact, but when, on the contrary, the water is impure the living organisms are as so many centers of action, which decompose the gelatine and give it the appearance of oily globules, proportioned in quantity to the ratio of impurity of the water under examination. On the second day some white points are visible. On the third day the little globules appear in much greater number. A turbid division is now remarked at the surface, and the micro-scope shows the presence of a multitude of bac-teria. On the fourth and fifth days this turbid division becomes greater and the gelatine be-comes liquid, beginning at the upper division, and this change is effected more rapidly in proportion to the impurity of the water. When the water is infectious the upper part is liquefied, and becomes milky and putrid at the expiration of 48 hours. The above process is very valuable for the purpose of determining the relative purity or mpurity of water. COUNTING THE MICROBES. I have also adopted in doubtful cases the method pursued by Dr. Koch, which is based but with this difference, that the examination is made with a certain number of drops, or a fraction of a drop, of water, and the number of colonies of microbes are counted in a given space. Knowing the volume of water mixed with the geiatine, we can readily calculate the with the geiatine, we can readily calculate the with the geiatine, we can readily calculate the model here at the suggestion of this committee.

In the remaining two cases no poison was discovered At the request of District Commissioner West atmospheric analyses were made at the Ban-neker, Twining and Analostan school buildings, and the result proved these buildings to be well ventilated, the quality of the atmospheric air being good.
Two analyses of giant powder (nitroglycerine), six of rocks from the reservoir tunnel shafts, and seven of water from different springs in the new reservoir, were made at the request of Capt. Symons, corps of engineers U. S. A. The seven samples of water were all found to be good, pure, potable water.

EXAMINING PAVEMENTS AND CEMENTS.

A large part of the report is devoted to setting forth the results of tests and analyses made of asphalt pavements and cements for the engineer department. Prof. De Smedt says he has, as in preceding years, made daily analyses of the asphalt pavement laid in the District. The average percentage of asphalt cement in 165 samples was: Chemically pure asphalt, 9.20 (commercial, 13.80); carbonate of lime, 5.00: granite stone dust, 7.00; sand, 78.00. The average composition of asphalt block is: Asphalt cement, chemically pure, 7.50 (commercial, 11.25); broken stone, &c., 92.50. These compositions give satisfactory results. All the hydraulic cements used on the public works of the District have been submitted to a daily test as to their tensile strength. Tables are given showing the results of these tests, both as to light-burned home-made cements and the hydraulic Portland cement.

Portland cement is composed of bi-basic silicate of lime and aluminate of lime. Sometimes it contains small quantities of magnesia as silicate or aluminate, some oxide of iron, alkali in small quantity, &c. The magnesia may be calculated as lime when found in small quantities. A limestone such as dolemite, containing forty-six per cent of magnesia, has been pronounced unfit for making good cement, but when the percentage of magnesia, has been pronounced unfit for making good cement, but when the percentage of magthe asphalt pavement laid in the District. The per cent is detrimental, but a small percentage of alkali, such as soda or potash, adds very much to the virtue of the cement. It is necessary that calcimation should be at the proper degree of heat and length of time in order produce the formation of bi-basic silicate of ime and aluminate of lime. COMPARISON BETWEEN LIGHT-BURNED CE MENTS.

In the light-burned cement there is no for mation of aluminate of lime, simply a formation of bibasic silicate of lime, magnesia, and a small percentage of silicate of alumnia. As a result of comparative tests and analyses of Shepherdstown cement and Roundtop cement, the report says: 1st. The Shepherdstown cement takes longer to set than the Roundtop, owing to its containing a greater quantity of magnesia. 2d. Neat Roundtop cement possesses greater tensile strength than neat Shepherdstown on account of its containing a larger percentage of bi-selicates; but when mixed with sand, these two cements are almost equal in strength, with a slight leaning in favor of the Shepherdstown. This is accounted for by the extreme fineness of the Shepherdstown and the relative coarseness of the Roundtop cement. In concluding his report Prof. De Smedt says: "I trust that my labors have resulted in shedding some light upon the subject of cements that will prove valuable not only to the manufacturer but also to the consumer, and more particularly in regard to the manufacture of Portland cement in this country, where the raw material abounds in such unlimited quantities that there is no reason why we should not become the exporters of this valuable commodity instead of importers, as we still are to a great ex-

Two well-dressed men drove up to the farmer's house and represented they were fertilizer dealers from New York. HE THRASHED AN OPERA SINGER.—A dispatch from Lebanon, Pa., says: Col. A. Frank Seltzer, a member of the bar, stirred Lebanon society to its center Monday by thrashing an opera singer. The unfortunate vocalist, in search of "local gags," brought the house down by introducing the colonel's name in a song in "The Chimes of Normandy." When the singer emerged from the theater still flushed with his triumph he was met by the irate lawyer equally flushed with a sense of outraged dignity, and in ten seconds the two were surrounded by an excited crowd, who saw the tenor thoroughly caned before interfering. The ladies are ever seen on the pool stand. They for their commissions. Usually several ladies, frequently five or six, unite in buying a pool ticket and the delight they manifest at seeing the horse they have backed pass under the wire first teils the weil-known story of Gen. Grant having, during his tour around the world, by his advice averted an impending war between China and Japan, which several European nations were endeavoring to stir up. Mr. Depew continues: The conversation drifted into a consideration of his relations with President Andrew Johnson. The narrative of this period was one of the most graphic descriptions to which I ever listened, and it is unfortunate for history and posterity that it cannot be preserved as it was told. It was in substance as follows: Johnson began the day after the assassination of Mr. Lincoln to loudiy proclaim the shibboleth, "Treason is odious and must be punished, and the chief rebels shall be hung." He insisted upon the United States courts in Virginia finding indictments against all the leading meming indictments against all the leading mem-bers of the confederacy. He also wanted the officers in the rebel army who had left the regdealt with by court-martial. These movements of the President produced the greatest consternation throughout the south. The confederate leaders appealed to Grant to protect them on both honor and expediency demanded equal good faith on the part of the government. John-son assumed the authority of commander, when Grant flatly told him that if there were to be any courts-martial one must be called to Gen. Grant first: that he would by every means in his power protect his parole and appeal to Con-gress and the country. In the halt called by this attitude of Gen. Grant a very remarkable Freycinet, thus retiring from the government change occurred in the views and policy of Preswithout the commotion and uncertainty which would have resulted from his refusing to head ident Johnson. Gen. Grant discovered that the most frequent and favored visitors to the White

If the other northern members did not choose to join, they would be a powerless rump meeting in some hall. To the general's suggestion that this would start the civil war afresh, the President replied:

After endeavoring in vain to convince the President of the folly of such a course Grant finally told him that he would drive the Congress so constituted out of the Capitol at the point of the bayonet, give possession of the building to the Senators and Representatives from the loyal states and protect them. If necessary he would appeal to the country and to the army he had so recently mustered out of service. Mr. Johnson asked him if he did not recognize the power vested in the President by the constitution, and if he would refuse to obey the commander-in-chief. Gen. Grant said that under such circumstances he most certainly would.
